

Engage employees in creating a healthy and sustainable environment

What EarthShare can do for you

Workplace Giving Campaigns

Expand your employees' philanthropic choice while providing a simple, convenient way to support conservation and healthy communities – locally, nationally and internationally.

Volunteer Opportunities

Connect your employees with hands-on volunteer projects, such as beach clean-ups, trail maintenance, park restoration and community gardening. We can help you organize an office volunteer day with our member organizations.

Educational Presentations & Tools

We can provide expert speakers for employee forums, as well as green lifestyle tips and other content from trusted environmental charities.

Since 1987, EarthShare Washington (ESW) has partnered with Washington companies, offering employees the opportunity to learn about and support outstanding local, national and international organizations. Every year, thousands of employees support EarthShare Washington's 60+ organizations with a simple, convenient payroll pledge.

We can help you:

Increase your company's visibility as a socially responsible and contributing member of the community.

Demonstrate a commitment to improving your employees' health and the health of the planet.

Connect your employees to your sustainability initiatives - Connecting your employees to environmental causes while showcasing what you're doing as a company to address sustainability is a great way to get everyone involved.

Improve morale among your employees - 86% of EarthShare donors feel better about their employer because they offer environmental giving options.

Help respected nonprofits invest in public priorities such as community health and welfare; protection of our air, water and open spaces; energy conservation; wildlife preservation; and much more.

Employee participation promotes ownership and leadership, drives the development of internal practices and policies, and positions companies as thoughtful leaders in employee relations and environmental responsibility.

One environment. One simple way to care for it.®

Creating Meaningful Employee Connections

One environment.

EarthShare Washington in the Workplace

Leadership and diversity define EarthShare Washington, both in the organizations it represents and the companies with which it partners: Microsoft, Boeing, Parametrix, Mithun, REI, Home Depot, to name a few. Employees at these companies share a common vision for Washington State: clean water, breathable air, vibrant and healthy communities, and vital recreational lands

Accountable, Efficient, Trusted

The best and brightest environmental organizations earn the privilege and responsibility of EarthShare Washington membership. Each organization undergoes a rigorous evaluation by an independent team of scientists, non-profit experts, and community leaders. In addition to the application process, ESW assesses annually each organization's financial and operational health.

EarthShare Washington consistently exceeds accountability standards established by the Better Business Bureau's Wise Giving Alliance. In nonprofit circles, establishing and maintaining the public's trust is not only the most important key to longevity, it is the only key.

Fostering Connections with Premier Organizations

In addition to distributing employee contributions to ESW member organizations, what can ESW offer your company?

Educational presentations with compelling speakers covering five key issue areas: (1) energy & climate; (2) forests, habitat & wildlife; (3) pollution & toxics; (4) sustainable communities; and (5) recreation & parks.

Charitable campaign support including informational materials and giveaway items to promote environmental giving in the workplace.

Volunteer opportunities — whether it's custom designing a volunteer day for your employees, or directing them to a worthwhile event in your community.

“ EarthShare Washington's planning is critical to us because we rely heavily on the workplace giving support ESW is able to generate. It's a straight line between ESW's effectiveness, and the work we do for trails and hikers around Washington. ”

Craig McKibben

– Washington Trails Association,
Interim Executive Director

Over the past two years Washington Trails Association has recruited, trained, and supported 2,000 volunteers per year to maintain hiking trails statewide; a total of 162,000 hours with a value of more than $2 million to our public lands.

Frequently Asked Questions

One simple way to care for it.®

What are the benefits of adding EarthShare to your employee giving program?

EarthShare Washington's 60+ organizations resonate with a broad employee base. Non-profits as diverse as Washington Trails Association, EarthCorps, Climate Solutions, People For Puget Sound – they embody the reasons people live and raise families in Washington State. Prominent businesses like Microsoft, Boeing, REI, Aerojet, Mithun and others enthusiastically support EarthShare Washington.

How is a gift distributed?

Donations to EarthShare Washington (ESW) are distributed equally among our organizations. Donors may also choose to have their gifts directed to the organization(s) of their choice according to the guidelines established by their workplace.

“ Because EarthShare Washington balances local and national recipients, my support is felt at home but also contributes to a global picture of environmental health. ”

Microsoft donor

How does ESW choose its member organizations?

The process begins with the recruitment of an evaluation team. This team of community leaders – including experts in science, communications, non-profit operations, and program evaluation reviews applications from scores of interested organizations. Following this two-month review, the team recommends organizations to EarthShare Washington's board of directors for final review and selection.

The process renews triennially, while the ESW staff reviews each organization's finances and programs in the intervening years.

Organizations must focus on one or more of the following critical issue areas:

(1) energy & climate; (2) habitat, forests & wildlife; (3) pollution & toxics; (4) sustainable communities; (5) recreation & parks.

Scrutinizing its organizations regularly is one reason EarthShare Washington has earned the confidence of tens of thousands of donors.

Is the environment a workplace priority?

In November 2010 the Greater Seattle Chamber of Commerce released findings from a survey of 1,100 businesses. Questions probed the opportunities and challenges facing companies today, particularly those in King County.

*To the question, “What are the primary benefits of doing business in King County?” the top response was environmental surroundings & quality of life.

(Other responses included proximity to universities, technology focus, entrepreneurial spirit, skilled labor force, etc.)

This survey affirms a similar poll conducted 10 years ago by the Seattle Times: the #1 reason people live and do business here is the environment and quality of life. HR professionals agree that our environment and quality of life are significant recruitment and retention factors.

How does adding ESW to our campaign affect employee participation?

A 2010 study of workplace giving trends by LBG Associate confirms this: as choices are added, participation rates grow.

“ According to the research, almost every company cites an increase in employee participation as part of the business case for change. The next two big reasons for change also relate to employees: 72% of respondents feel it demonstrates a responsiveness to employee desires and 66% feel it increases employee morale. One third believes it helps recruit and retain talent. It is not surprising, then, that 92% of companies believe that having an expanded or open workplace giving program is a benefit for their employees. ”
